

GEORGIA TRAINING TO DEFEAT YALE

Determined to Send Eleven North to Conquer "Old Eli"

By The Associated Press.
Athens, Ga., Sept. 22.—Husky lads of the University of Georgia gridiron squad are assembling here for the opening of the football training season determined to send an eleven northward to defeat Yale this fall.

The Georgia Bulldogs have kept themselves in good condition through the summer months. When commencement came to an end in June, Coach George Woodruff, newly elected mentor of the grid game, instructed his material to "watch their legs" and remember training rules through the hot months.

Six of the football players have been in the wheat fields of Kansas, where they are reported to have enjoyed plenty of work, 25 miles from Pratt, Taylor, Carmichael, Newton, Carroll, Smith and Greene composed this party.

Handall, George's star, has been in Columbus, Ga., working and playing baseball. Joe Bennett, captain of the team and one of the best kick blockers in the south, has been at Camp Dixie, Ga., where, with George Pfann, leader of Cornell's grid team, he was an athletic instructor. Butler and Gurr, the latter a basketball star, have been in Chicago in the employ of a business concern.

The Yale game will be fought October 13. On October 29, Georgia will clash with Mercer University and on October 6, Oglethorpe University. Both of the games will be played in Athens, and are expected to be excellent early season contests to put Georgia in condition for the battle with Yale.

Other games on the University's schedule are Tennessee, in Knoxville, October 20; Auburn in Columbus, Ga., November 3; University of Virginia, in Athens, November 10; Vanderbilt, in Nashville, November 17; University of Alabama, in Montgomery, November 24, and Centre in Athens, December 2.

such strong backfield men out McCue, as captain, might have had a hard time to be secure in a back berth. Consequently the coach wanted to make an end of him to assure him a regular position on the team.

The Herald does not take responsibility for this explanation, but merely prints it as one of the phases of the High school muddle.

Last night 25 officials and members of this year's squad issued a statement in support of Coach Cassidy and contradicting charges that have been made by McCue.

The statement follows:
To the Editor:
We, the undersigned candidates for the positions on the N. B. H. S. football team, do emphatically deny the charges brought against Coach Cassidy in connection with the resignation of William McCue as captain of the team. Since the first year Coach Cassidy has undertaken the coaching of athletic teams at the local high school, it has always been his policy to have one player who is thoroughly familiar with all points of the game, and also positions on the team, act in an advisory capacity. For example, in the 1921 football season, when New Britain won the state championship, "Dixie" Griffin was the man chosen for this position because of his knowledge of the fine points of the game. Fineman, one of the finest captains New Britain ever had, realizing this to be for the best advantage and success of his team, played through the season without complaining against this system of coaching.

It worked to be a one of the smoothest running teams N. B. H. S. ever had put on the gridiron. It was also charged that Coach Cassidy showed favoritism to those spending their vacation at his home in Vermont. Anyone attending practices of the squad can readily see that Coach Cassidy has shown no favoritism in his selections. The incident marking Captain McCue's resignation was not as represented in the newspaper; it was as follows:

After Coach Cassidy called all the candidates in a group he chose his most probable candidate for the line position. McCue was asked to take left end; he refused, with this remark, "Put someone else there." Following this Coach Cassidy picked a backfield man to run the team and asked him whom he wished to have as his running mate. At this point McCue spoke up and said that he was captain. Coach Cassidy then picked out his backfield, leaving McCue out. The next day the newspapers stated that McCue was undoubtedly untrue as Coach Cassidy then asked McCue to play the second string backfield.

We also wish to state that not a single man with the exceptions of Captain McCue and O'Brien have quit the squad or ever had intentions of so doing. The morale of the team has not been lowered one particle on account of the happenings of the last few days. On the contrary, we are out to add another championship team to the long list the Red and Gold now holds.

20 HIGH SCHOOL BOYS SIGN PAPER

Maybe the reported ruptures in the High school eleven are not as bad as presented. At any event, the team starts today's game with a backfield that looks mighty bad.

The boys are using the Iowa system, having Halfback Zehrer call off the signals.

The three backfield men are fast boys and much should be heard from them this year.

It is reported that Coach Cassidy, who had them up in Vermont all summer, decided upon their selection as first string players almost as soon as the season opened.

It is this, it is said, that brings about the charges of favoritism.

Others, there are, however, who maintain that these boys are entitled to their positions by virtue of their good work.

Ex-Captain McCue and O'Brien, both of whom have quit the squad, charging favoritism, were backfield men a year ago. The coach wanted to try them out at end this fall but they said nothing doing.

But with all the stories going around, it seems as though the school board, the Alumni or some other outside party ought to investigate the matter thoroughly and sift the charges to the bottom.

If the coach is being wronged, it should be known. If the players are not getting a square deal, that should be known, too.

The matter now seems to have reached a point where something should be done to settle the matter once and for all.

Continual bickering, back-biting and complaining do not strengthen the team as a playing organization, or as a body that is entitled to the public's support.

The New York Giants yesterday advanced a stride nearer the 1923 National League pennant and their third consecutive championship by trouncing Pittsburgh, one of their two principal rivals, in two games, while the Cincinnati Reds were winning but one from Brooklyn.

The world's champions now have a lead of four and a half games over the Reds, who are in second place, and eight games over the Pirates.

The Giants need to win but four of their remaining eight games to make the winning of the pennant a mathematical certainty, even should the Reds capture all of the remaining eight contests. In that eventually the Giants would be at the top, by one half game with the final standing as follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Giants	95	58	.628
Reds	95	59	.617

Pittsburgh, though virtually eliminated from the race today, still has a mathematical chance. However, the Giants need win but three of their remaining games to finish ahead of the Pirates, even if the latter win all of their remaining 11 games.

The Mohawk football team practices tomorrow morning at the Pioneer grounds on Ellis street.

The Besse-Leland nine plays the Fuller Brush team of Hartford at St. Mary's field tomorrow at 3 p. m. Palmer and Carpenter is the New Britain battery.

It is very probable that this will conclude the local baseball season.

Jack Dempsey has just taken out the final installment thereby paying up in full, a $25,000 endowment insurance policy.

Boone, a Red Sox recruit playing his first big league game, won for his team over the Tigers yesterday with a triple. Later he was injured and had to be taken to a hospital.

Babe Ruth certainly has staged a remarkable come-back this year. Not so much his playing maybe, as it is as a player. Last year he was the big league's bad boy and did not get a single vote for "most valuable player." This year he got them all.

Fred Hunt, a lineman, formerly with All-Bridgeport, is to aid in coaching the All-New Britain team.

Local fans are planning a presentation of "Merikie" Jacobson when the Orioles play in Hartford, Oct. 5.
